HONGKONG, 18th April, 1903.

The death of Yung Lu removes one more of the old type of officials whose ignorance of the new world conditions prevailing throughout the globe have brought so much misery on their native countries. Without any pretence of statesmanship he yet possessed so much of the statescraft that is often mistaken for it, that for many years he has not only preserved his own in the corrupt administration of Peking, but has made himself sufficiently powerful to make his influence felt throughout China, and to become a factor which even the most influential of the Powers have felt themselves compelled to reckon with. That under the old conditions Yung Lu might have materially altered the course of events in the Far East goes, we may say, without saying; that under the new he well might have brought about the ruin of his country is equally incontrovertible. Those new conditions Yung Lu never had the ability to comprehend, and we may without hesitancy say that his removal can only be looked upon as a relief to the country he so badly served. To residents in China who are able to measure the position of affairs, the forbodings of the home Press as to the immediate future seem strangely despondent; and we can only attribute their lugubrious tone to a mistaken view of the real power possessed by the late favourite of the Emperor Dowager. In point of fact though Yung Lu's private sentiments up to the very end never underwent any change for the better, his ability for evil has been long a thing of the past. Even the Dowager Ts'ui with all the will has seen the necessity of discarding him, and sorely against her own desires has had to yield to the too powerful current. Still the best wishers for China's prosperity and independence cannot but feel that a distinct load has been removed out of the way, and that there is now less friction in the way of the machine of State. In this respect the present condition of affairs in China contrasts favourably with that prevailing in Turkey. The Chinese in worldly affairs have never shown themselves blind to their own best interests; there are in China no questions of oppressed nationalities to complicate the question of reform; and the nation, though like all Oriental peoples, conservative to the backbone, has throughout its history shown a ready ability to take a practical grasp of an altered position. The vast majority of the nation has become convinced that times have altered and the present system is not able to cope with the altered position, and a pressure, none the less real that it is silent, has undoubtedly begun to assert itself even in the councils of Peking. The old school of which Li Hung-chang, Yung Lu and Sheng Kung-pao were the most conspicuous examples has no successors; new men and new ideas are forcing themselves to the front, and as each one of the old drops off, his place is filled by men of different calibre. We do not flatter ourselves that the new men are morally better than the old, or that their ingrained prejudices are powerful. They have, however, learned a good deal of the practical side of the politics of the world, and there is, we believe, little chance of the old follies being repeated. Nor, as we have said before, are we disposed to place much importance on the efforts of such discredited barbarians as Prince Tuan and Tseu Fu-shiang. It is probable enough that they have had the secret connivance of both Yung Lu and the Dowager Ts'ui, but the power for mischief of both one and the other was at all times greatly exaggerated, and even before the access of the former was a practically negligible quantity.

In the acting appointments which he has made consequent upon leave of absence being granted to Sir W. M. Goodman, the Chief Justice, His Excellency the Governor has made a departure from a long established practice which does not meet with public approval. Hitherto, it has been the practice in the Colony when the Chief Justice has been away on leave to appoint the Puisne Judge to act in his place; but on the present occasion the claims of the Attorney-General to the honour have been preferred to those of the Puisne Judge. It has been stated that the appointment belongs to the Attorney-General as of right, which presumably means custom or precedent, (such as the appointment at home of the Attorney-General to be Lord Chief Justice) for we can find no Colonial Office rule on regulation bearing on the question, these provide merely that every officer proceeding on leave must make adequate arrangements for the performance of his duties. In this case Sir W. Goodman proceeds on vacation leave, which carries full pay. There is no abatement of salary during vacation leave, but the leave must be recorded under the Governor's hand, and the officer absenting himself must, with the concurrence or sanction of the Governor, have made such arrangements as may be necessary for the adequate discharge of his duties without cost to the public. The proper course to have followed therefore was for Sir W. Goodman to have asked Mr. Justice Wise to perform his duties for the two months that he was taking leave, without any necessity of removing the Attorney-General and the Government putting in a non-service man, thereby dislocating both the judicial and legal departments. The criticism which the acting appointments have evoked has been due not to any hostility to the gentlemen who have been honoured by the appointments by H. E. the Governor, for they are both gentlemen of unquestioned ability and integrity—but it originates partly in the high respect which is generally entertained for Mr. Justice Wise, whose long experience in the Colony no less than his proved ability as a Judge constitute the strongest possible claim to the honour of the acting appointment to the Chief Justiceship. It is, we have no doubt, disagreeable to all the gentlemen concerned to find their names used in a discussion of this kind in the public Press, but the present acting appointments invite criticism inasmuch as they constitute a departure from established practice, appear to us to be bad in principle and opposed to the letter and the spirit of the Colonial Office rules and regulations. "In general it may be stated," says Rule 70, "that his Majesty will be advised to regard more favourably appointments which are in the nature of promotions of meritorious public servants rather than appointments made in favour of persons new to the public service; and again (Rule 73), "great weight must always be attached to local services and experience." In the best interests of the service, it is desirable that these regulations should be strictly observed.

Whilst a lakong was on duty at a plague house at 26, Aberdeen Street on the afternoon of the 16th inst., he saw a coolie emerge from the place with some bottles, wood, and pieces of clothing that he had picked up inside. He arrested the man, who was sentenced to 14 days' hard labour yesterday by Mr. F. A. Hazeland, Police Magistrate.

A Tokyo telegram to the N. C. Daily News states that the Japanese journals publish numerous telegrams which indicate that the evacuation of Manchuria by Russia is altogether mythical. It is believed that the Russian procedure is plainly suggestive of warlike intentions, or is a tentative display to test the patience of the Powers. There is growing excitement in public opinion in Japan.

On arrival at Halifax, N.S., last month, the British steamer Umbagog reported that she was in a hurricane for nineteen days, during nine of which she covered only 300 miles. She was driven back one day sixty-eight miles and another day seventy-four miles. Mountains were swept by her decks from stem to stern, smashing boats, bridges and steering gear. The carpenter was crushed to death in the after-house and the boatswain had his arm broken. Four of the crew were badly hurt. Constant use of oil kept the steamer from being engulfed by the seas.

Thirty-seven Chinese, who were taken to San Francisco from Hongkong in the steamship Coptic to serve as a crew for the British steamer Wyfield and were transferred to that vessel were, it is reported, to be sent back to their homes. A protest against the employment of the Chinese on the Wyfield was made to the Rosenfelds, owners of the vessel, by labour union representatives, and was favourably considered, although the Chinese demanded wages for the four months that will have elapsed from the time they were engaged in China until they are returned here.

The best sailing vessel flying the American flag is the steel four-master Atlas, which arrived at Baltimore a few weeks ago after a run of 15,300 miles from Hongkong in ninety-two days. The Atlas averaged 172 miles a day and 7½ knots an hour. Her best day's run was 312 miles, at the rate of 12½ knots an hour. This breaks all authentic records, except that of the barque Amy Turner, which made the run from Hongkong to the Virginia coast in eighty-seven days. The Atlas beat out of eight the British barque Kelat, which cleared for New York eleven days ahead of the Atlas. The English captain is said to have backed the sailing qualities of his vessel, but at the time the Atlas reached Baltimore the Kelat had not arrived in New York.

At the annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce last month on the motion of Mr. G. H. Cox (Liverpool), seconded by Mr. A. F. Firth (Hull), a resolution was passed expressing the opinion that a survey should be undertaken for a light railway from Blamo to Mowin, via the Taping Valley, with a view to promoting facilities for the conveyance of merchandise between Burma and South-Western China, and that most offices should be opened in the district under British management, in order, amongst other purposes, to facilitate and make secure the transmission of cash for the settlement of trade accounts in substitution for the present method of conveying cash by mule caravans.

According to Admiral Fremantle, Britain is 167 cruisers short of the number which would be required in war-time for the adequate protection of trade routes.

"It is one of the little singularities of these modern times"—we quote from the Times of March 1, 1893—"that the offender you hear of a lady being at home, the less domestic is her character; and, that the wider she opens her doors to her acquaintance, the more impenetrably barred are they to her friends and her tradesmen."

A New York telegram of the 11th inst. states that while the U.S. battleship Texas was at target practice one of the guns in her forward turret exploded killing three of the crew and seriously injuring a number of others. The superstructure of the ship is badly damaged and she will require extensive repairs. A court of enquiry will be convened to investigate the disaster.

A telegram from New York to a Manila contemporary says the Vatican has announced three American appointments to the Philippine dioceses. They are Rt. Rev. George Montgomery to be Archbishop of the islands, and Dougherty and Rooker to be bishops. A later telegram states that Rt. Rev. George Montgomery has declined the appointment, as he desires to stay in his present diocese.

The steady persistence manifested by Chinese traders and shopkeepers in setting the law at defiance in the matter of verandah obstruction, is, says the Strait Times, to say the least of it, amazing, and amounts to contempt for the law and its machinery. The same men appear before the Municipal Court week after week, and it is becoming quite a common thing, the prosecuting officers say, that a defendant has been convicted a dozen times. In many cases the nature of the obstruction is such as to practically block the footway, and the man who so blocks the way thinks he is right, and lives in the pious hope that he will tire out the officials, whom he now accuses of persecuting him. Might not an introduction of the tidy system that obtains in the towns of the Netherlands Indies prove beneficial to Singapore?

The Comptroller-General in some remarks on the appropriation account for the Navy, mentions under the heading "Penalties for Delay," that since the date of his last report the committee appointed to enquire into the general question of arrears of shipbuilding have issued their report, and with regard to the question of penalties, while the committee are of opinion that penalty clauses should be retained in all contracts, and that there are instances in which penalties should be enforced, they express their belief that "nothing will be gained, and something might be lost, by making it a rule to enforce penalties for delay in construction." In an appendix a statement is made of the more important instances of late delivery on which penalties have accrued but in none of which instances does it appear that penalties were enforced. Deductions, however, were made on account of failure to obtain contract speed in certain cases and fines were inflicted in several cases where contracts for guns were not completed to time.

The Lancet discusses the pathology of the state of this man who is "run down," and suggests a remedy. At will a man cannot change his daily occupation, but our contemporary suggests that "a variety of pursuits should save the mind from the dulling effects of monotony." "The brain should be trained, so to speak, to switch itself off directly the opportunity occurs, and instead of continuing to weary itself with the contemplation of business or professional complexities should reveal as soon as active work is stopped in other intellectual fields. The pleasures and distractions of the society of one's fellow-creatures, to some temperaments the most complete of all alleviations of worry, are not always at hand, but a hobby may be constantly accessible, and it behooves all men who find themselves "run down" to make an attempt towards the enjoyment of some intellectual activity different from that constantly demanded by their daily occupation." The prescription, if not new, is no doubt sound. It is truly worked to a marvel with Mr. Gladstone.

The N. Y. K. steamer Inaba Maru, which leaves here this morning for Europe, takes away two of the oldest residents in the Colony. In fact, we believe Mr. C. C. Cohen was the oldest resident. He came out in 1857 to join the firm of Oxford & Co., and has only visited his native country once since his arrival. Mr. Cohen was Chairman of the Stockbrokers' Association, and has been a familiar figure amongst the brokers for the last thirty years. Mr. G. C. Anderson, who is also a very old resident, has been nearly as long in China. He was for many years in Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co.'s coasting steamers, and was well known as commander of the Appin. He left that steamer to accept a shore appointment in the Indo-China S. N. Co., and has more lately acted as agent of the Bureau Veritas. Mr. Anderson has always taken a keen interest in the Navy, and for more than two years, has acted as Hon. Secretary of the Navy League, in the promotion of which he showed much energy and secured a large accession of members. An address from the Committee expressive of their great appreciation of his services in this capacity was presented to him shortly before his departure. Mr. Anderson was also entertained at a farewell dinner at the Hongkong Hotel by his numerous friends connected with the shipping interest, while the St. Andrew's Society (of which he was a former chairman) presented him with a silver watch as a memento of his long connection with it.

To-night and Monday A Gaiety Girl will be the attraction, and on Tuesday, the last performance, Pousse Café.

JUNK PIRATED.

On Thursday last a daring piracy was committed on board a fishing-junk lying at anchor in Starlit Inlet, a bay situated in British waters outside the harbour, but close to Chinese territory. Six Chinamen rowed off to the junk and boarded her before the occupants became aware of the hostile intentions of the visitors, who were armed with revolvers and daggers. A fight ensued, and one of the junk's crew was wounded by a shot; this man in his fear jumped overboard and was drowned. The remaining members of the crew, seeing the measures the pirates were prepared to adopt to achieve their purpose, ceased to oppose them, and the pirates proceeded to pillage the junk. They took $100 in money and everything worth the trouble of carrying away, ultimately leaving the boat and making their way back into Chinese territory beyond the possibility of capture.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT STATION IN KOWLOON.

Residents in Victoria have hitherto held an advantage over their neighbours in Kowloon in the possession of the electric light as an illuminant for their streets, offices, and residences, but the completion of the new lighting station at Hunghom of the China Light and Power Co., Ltd., has equalised matters in this direction and placed Kowloonites on a level footing with people on the other side of the harbour. The station in question was completed only recently and commenced operations on 2nd February last, since when everything in connection therewith has been running with complete smoothness unmarred by a hitch of any kind.

For a new concern feeling its way the business is doing remarkably well, and there is not the slightest doubt that it will be closely identified with the future development of Kowloon. Looking ahead of the times, its promoters have not waited till that development had assumed mature shape; till a want had arisen which competition would strive to supply. They have seen what is coming, and with ready forethought are prepared with the means to meet one of the first demands that will be made when the tide of population flows over British Kowloon.

Many people have visited the new power station since its erection, and all have manifested a keen interest in its working arrangements. The station is situated on the eastern front of the main road leading to Hunghom, and covers an area which leaves room for a considerable extension of the works should increasing business necessitate it. The power house, a large, airy building, holds three generators known as two-phase high-tension dynamos. These were made by the famous Westinghouse Company of America, and each has a capacity of 75 kilowatts; they are driven by patent compound surface-condensing engines, capable of developing over 100 h.p. each, and manufactured by the Ball & Wood Company of New York. Downstairs from the power-house is the boiler-room, where the plant is of an equally up-to-date type. There are three boilers built on the water-tube principle, each of them with a capacity of 100 h.p. Technically known as sectional boilers, they are of the latest American pattern—efficient, safe, easy of access for cleaning purposes and presenting every facility for quick and inexpensive repairs. In the store and godown attached to the station is to be found a large stock of electrical fittings of every description.

The station, which is at present under the management of Mr. J. Johnston, an electrical engineer of experience who supervised its erection, has been designed for supplying light and power over a radius of two miles; and in the latter direction possesses special adaptability, its two-phase system doing away with the expensive switch arrangements for the starting of motors necessary in the case of other systems. The main lines have been completed to the Green Island Cement Company's works at Hok Tin in one direction, and to the Kowloon Hotel in another. In addition to the Green Island Cement Company, the station has been supplying light to a number of Chinese places of business and residence in Hunghom, and is thus already finding an ever-widening sphere of usefulness.

Messrs. Shevan, Tones & Co. are the general managers.

THE DEATH OF YUNG LU.

The Grand Secretary and Councillor Yung Lu, generally known as the most powerful Minister of the Throne, died on the 12th inst. from alleged paralysis of the heart's functions. He had been ill for nearly three months of rheumatic fever and asthma, and was laid in his coffin at a quarter to eleven at night. The death of Yung Lu will be a favourable opportunity for the admittance of Viceroy Chang Chih-ling into the Grand Council, while the Wen An Tien, or Senior Grand Secretaryship, will probably fall to Kuan Kang, the Junior Manchurian Grand Secretary, and the Intef's post to the Manchou Assistant Grand Secretary, Chang Li.—N. C. Daily News.

A LATE VOYAGE OF THE "KINSHAN."

The new river steamer Kinshan (Capt. J. J. Lousine), built at the Kowloon Dock for the Hongkong, Canton, & Macao Steamboat Co., Ltd., made her maiden voyage to Canton on Wednesday, and returned thence soon after midnight on Thursday, after an entirely satisfactory trip. Mr. W. Wilson, manager of the Kowloon Dock, and Mr. W. Ramsay, superintendent engineer for Messrs. Butterfield & Swire, were on board, and a small party of ladies and gentlemen participated by invitation in the run, and from Canton. The Kinshan left the wharf here at twenty minutes to six on Wednesday afternoon and arrived at Canton at 6.15 the following morning. There a little informal dinner was partaken of at the residence of Captain Lousine, whose health and the prosperity of whose vessel were drunk. No personal functions were observed on voyage, the entire run being marked by an absence of formality. On leaving Canton, crackers were exploded to bring "good joss" to the Kinshan which made the run as far as Tiger Island slowly, and from there put on full speed, arriving at her wharf here, as already stated, soon after midnight on Thursday.

SUPREME COURT.

Friday, 17th April.

IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.

BEFORE HIS HONOUR SIR WILLIAM M. GOODMAN (CHIEF JUSTICE).

A CHARTER PARTY DISPUTE.

Judgment was given in the case in which Tam Loug Chuen and another, ship charterers, carrying on business in co-partnership at 728, Des Vaux Road Central, sued J. E. von der Ohe for damages, the action having arisen out of the charter by the plaintiffs of the Norwegian s.s. Sleipner. The plaintiffs cancelled the charter party on the ground, as they alleged, that the steamer did not come up to the speed stipulated, and claimed damages accordingly. Defendant denied that there had been any breach of the conditions regarding speed and stated that if there had been it was caused by the foul condition of the ship's bottom and other defects; he further contended that, even although there was failure on the part of the Sleipner to conform to speed conditions, such failure did not entitle plaintiffs to cancel the charter party, and he accordingly made a counter-claim for damages.

Mr. E. H. Sharp, K.C., barrister-at-law (instructed by Mr. F. B. L. Bowley of Messrs. Dennis and Bowley, solicitors), was counsel for the plaintiff; and Mr. T. Morgan Phillips, barrister-at-law (instructed by Mr. G. C. C. Master of Messrs. Johnson, Stokes and Master, solicitors), was for the defendant.

His Lordship in giving judgment said—In this case, the plaintiffs claim damages against the defendant for breach of a charter party alleged to have been committed by the owners of the Norwegian steamship Sleipner. The charter, which began on 27th January, 1902, was between the plaintiffs and the East Asiatic Trading Company, as agents for the defendant, and the captain of the Sleipner. It was a time charter for 12 months, and one of the conditions was that the Sleipner's speed should be about nine knots in fair weather, on a consumption of about 11 tons of best Cardiff coal per diem. The charter began to run at Bangkok. The Sleipner, which was built at Bergen in 1901, had not been out in these parts before, and, therefore, the charterers knew nothing of her except by the description in the particulars. The charter was arranged by Mr. Røggø, of Lambke and Røggø, and he got his particulars from the East Asiatic Trading Company, knowing nothing personally of the vessel. On the 1st July, 1902, the plaintiffs cancelled the charter party on the ground that the ship failed to comply with the condition as to speed. This step was taken after the Sleipner had made several trips which, in the plaintiffs' opinion, showed, taking them altogether, that the Sleipner did not comply with the condition mentioned. The defendant alleges this cancellation to be wrongful, and counter-claims for damages. He denies the failure to perform the speed condition and further says that, if the Sleipner failed to perform such condition, such failure did not justify the plaintiffs in cancelling the charter party. Under the charter the plaintiffs were to pay 6,700 Mexican dollars a month for the use and hire of the steamer, and it is admitted that they duly paid that sum till the date of cancellation. The case was tried at considerable length, before me, occupying no less than seven days, and I do not think that any point which could assist the contention of either side was omitted by the counsel who appeared for the respective parties. Ten witnesses were called by the plaintiffs and eight by the defendant, and the evidence was voluminous. The Sleipner, after being chartered, left Bangkok on her maiden voyage to Hongkong on the 3rd February, 1902, and she arrived at that port on the 26th, after having had to put into Saigon for additional coals on her way. According to the evidence of her master, Daniel Rodeth, she had on leaving Bangkok with a cargo of rice, 96 tons of Japanese, which they bought from a steamer. One would have expected that 236 tons would have brought her safely to Hongkong, a distance roughly of 1,500 miles (I think, in evidence, it was stated to be 1,497 miles). Naturally, she was likely to encounter a heavy monsoon at that season of the year, but if she had made an average of even five knots she ought to have done the trip in about 123 days. One cannot be surprised that the charterers were vexed at having to pay an additional coal bill for $4,350.25 for an extra 250 tons bought by the captain at Saigon. The captain, however, explained that after two days of fair weather, they experienced gales of wind for eight days and he deemed it safest to put into Saigon lest they should run short of coal. But it was proved that the Germania, which in her charter is described as a 94 knot steamer, arrived in Hongkong from Bangkok the same day as the Sleipner (26th February) having left Bangkok on the 18th; that is to say, over a fortnight later than the Norwegian ship; and in ordinary circumstances it is at most an eight-days' voyage for ships of about the 9-knot class. Others did it in that time in February, 1902. However, at the interview Capt. Rodeth explained that the bad weather was the cause of it all and that really the Sleipner could do her 9 knots. According to the evidence the second voyage began on 2nd March and lasted till 19th May. It included trips to Saigon, thence to Singapore, back to Saigon, thence to Manila and Rejing, and finally back to Hongkong. On this voyage the performances of the Sleipner were better but on the whole much nearer eight knots than nine. This failure to come up to the speed condition was accounted for by the captain by allegation of bad coal. But it must not be forgotten that on 1st March, in sending the coal on board, the charterers wrote to the chief engineer: "We beg to send you 100 tons Cardiff coal and 70 tons Shikano lump coal, which we hope you will be good enough to weigh on board and receive it if it is in good condition, and also return to us the enclosed receipt by the bearer after you have signed it." It seems strange in face of that letter to have the second engineer describe in the witness-box that very coal as consisting of only four or five tons lump and all the rest like sand. The coal was very expensive coal and it was nearly all like sand it should not have been received on board in face of that letter, at all events without telling the charterers at the time. On the 31st May, after the plaintiffs' solicitors had written the letter of 26th May, 1902, practically warning the agents that next trip would be treated as a final test, the third and last voyage began, counting the voyage up from Bangkok as the first. It was to Hoilo and back, and the speed was about 6.6 knots. But this the captain explained was owing to the want of dry docking, which had not been done since the vessel left England the previous November. Indeed he wrote a letter dated the 26th May which he delivered to the charterers on the 27th May as follows:—"In consideration of your chartering the s.s. Sleipner on conditions that make it impossible to dry-dock the steamer when I find it necessary, you will please notice that the speed will be accordingly and all other consequences resulting therefrom be on your own risk and expense." The charterers cancelled the charter on 1st July and then the ship was docked, and no doubt at that time had a foul bottom, in spite of having been altogether somewhere about 20 days at Saigon during the charter in fresh water. The case for the charterers was that, at all events in the China Sea, the Sleipner (which is built, as Mr. Gordon put it, somewhat like a collier or barge and lacks the coefficient of fineness required out here) is not a ship of about 9 knots in fair weather. After consideration of all the evidence, and the excuses as to coal and, on the last voyage, of foul bottom, I find as a fact that there was a substantial breach of the charter party condition as to speed and that the plaintiffs were, in all the circumstances, entitled to cancel the contract. It was, however, urged by Mr. Morgan Phillips that even if there was a failure of performance as to the speed condition, yet the plaintiffs had waived their right to cancel by not having done so at once, i.e., so soon as the vessel arrived from Bangkok or at all events at the end of the second voyage under the charter. No doubt it is the law that if the breach of a condition precedent is waived by one of the parties to a contract, by not repudiating the contract, after he knows of such breach, the condition precedent is converted into a simple term of the contract and its breach only gives rise to an action for damages. But in the present case, it must be borne in mind that the defendant has all along denied that there ever was a breach, and, so far from admitting it, would have gone to law with the plaintiffs if they had repudiated the contract. Indeed he has now done so and counter-claims in this action. The plaintiffs were, surely, justified in continuing to employ the ship and pay the stipulated monthly sum for so doing, till they had given her a sufficient trial to enable them to establish that a breach had actually occurred and thus to show that they were entitled to cancel the charter party. It is contrary to common sense that the plaintiffs, having paid the full contract price for the use of the Sleipner for over five months, and been put to extra expense for coal, should be told that they must go on employing her till the end of the twelve months, because they were induced by the Captain's explanations and excuses as to the first and second voyages to give her a very full trial before cancelling the contract. The correspondence between the parties must not be forgotten. I am aware that much has been said on both sides which merits careful consideration, both as to the facts and the law, but, after giving the evidence and the legal arguments full consideration, I find that there has been a breach of the speed condition of the charter party of such a character as to defeat the commercial purpose of the charter party. I hold that the charterers were entitled to cancel and that there was no waiver of their right, having regard to all the circumstances, including the correspondence between the parties and their solicitors. The plaintiffs are, therefore, entitled to judgment with costs and, unless the parties can agree upon a sum, the amount had better be referred to some gentleman conversant with such matters. The parties, I understand, are not likely to have any difficulty in agreeing upon such a referee, but if they cannot agree, they had better mention the matter to me again, and I will arrange for the assessment of damages. In all the circumstances, I do not think they will be found to amount to anything in the least like the large amount claimed by the plaintiffs.

After delivering judgment His Lordship remarked that the case had given him a great deal of anxious thought and trouble. He thought the right course under all the circumstances would be for some sum—quite a small sum—to be agreed upon between the parties so that the defendant would be saved the expense of a reference. The plaintiffs were the winners and they might very fairly be merciful on the point of damages.

Mr. Sharp—Certainly, my lord.

His Lordship added that with regard to the defendant he might mention that the expenses in the assessment of damages would naturally fall on him and therefore he thought it would be advisable on his part to agree to the payment of such small sum and save further expense in the matter.

The Court adjourned.

THE UNREST IN CHINA.

AN APPEAL TO LORD LANSOWNE.
Says the Spectator:—"There is food for meditation for Lord Lansdowne in the Chinese rumours [as to a renewed anti-foreign movement] even if he disbelieves them. As with the slow imagination which seems to mark all our Ministers of State, he probably does; and as he meditates he will probably remember the great changes which the last few years have wrought in the British position in the Far East. We may not have lost strength there—indeed, we have not, for we have gained the Japanese Fleet, if not also the Japanese Army—but we have lost much of our freedom. We can no longer set alone. Any movement against foreigners in China would at once revive the European Concert, and if the Concert acted again it could not be contented a second time with a mere tribute. There would be no more money to get, and any new claim to compensation for the past and security for the future must be satisfied in territory. As the distribution must be among jealous rivals, that opens up a far-reaching prospect of dispute; and even that is not all. Our new obligations to Japan have to be considered. The Japanese would doubtless be most loyal and side with the Europeans, but they cannot in their own interest allow a further serious advance by Russia; and if Russia quarrels with them for interfering, or they quarrel with Russia for advancing, we are bound in honour to make their cause our own. The complications might be, in the event of an outbreak must be, most serious, and we have rather a habit of drifting till we find ourselves in their midst. We are sailing everywhere amongst derelicts, and trust rather too completely to the skill of the steersman, whose searchlight is sometimes out of order, and the strength of the ship, which is very great no doubt, but which may be overtaxed. We shall be told by all manner of officials that what we have quoted as the latest rumours are only 'the usual alarmist rubbish' always pouring in from China. It may be so, and we heartily hope it is so, our one real interest in China being peaceful trade on all the waters of the Empire, but there are, with respect to news from Peking, always two points to be remembered. One is that the force which drove the Chinese Army on the Legations still rules in China, is implicitly obeyed, and cannot have been conciliated by the result of the war. The other is that no European Foreign Office, except possibly the Russian, has ever succeeded, in spite of skilled agents and great resources, in feeling sure that it fully understood the forces which impel the Chinese Court. . . . We do not expect Lord Lansdowne to take precautions which, whether wise or foolish, would at once awaken Continental jealousy; but he may at least remember clearly that last time every Minister at Peking except the French disbelieved all warnings."

THE RISE OF THE RICKSHA.

The following interesting article on the rise of the ricksha in the Straits Settlements is taken from the Straits Times:—

While decanting upon the subject of rickshas, it may be interesting to mention the fact that the first man to ride in one of these Settlements was none other than that well-known resident of Singapore, Mr. H. Abrams. It was in the days when there were no rickshas in the land, and no man knew either the meaning of a ricksha or the use thereof. In those days, as now, they used to bring waders up from Australia to meet the demands of the local Jehus; but the system differed from that now in vogue inasmuch as that the horses came up in sailing ships, and were auctioned off by Messrs. Powell and Co. in front of their godown on Raffles Square. The horses were paraded on the street, where the would-be purchasers and the non-productive crowd of idle onlookers essential to a sale of horses, fongathered to lead consequence and picturesque to the auction. Well, one day about twenty-three or twenty-four years ago, the usual lot of horses had been paraded and sold, as well very possibly as a carriage or two, when Powell and Co.'s hirelings dragged forth into public view a couple of jirikshas and put them up for sale. That was some time in 1878 or 1879. In the February of 1880 the first real consignment of the vehicles arrived from Shanghai and were put on the streets to ply for hire. These two pioneers of the business, however, were gazed upon by the astonished populace with the same amazed interest that would have been bestowed upon a pair of unicorns or a two-headed giraffe. They had been consigned to Powell & Co. over a year before "on spec," but had found no purchaser; and an order had come from the consignors to auction them off at any price they might fetch. Accordingly out they were dragged into Raffles Square, and the wondering people gaped at them disapprovingly. Then it was that Mr. Abrams, with a long driving whip in hand—this was night upon a quarter of a century ago—rose to the occasion. He hurried into the crowd and "commandeered" a coolie who had possibly, in the erstwhile, pulled a ricksha in Shanghai. Him did he "commandeer," and then, with a great cracking of his long carriage whip, and amid the tumultuous plaudits of the multitude, he rode up and down the side of the square in the first jiriksha that ever appeared on the streets of Singapore. The two derelicts sold at some such figure as $4 apiece, one going to Mr. Cuff of the Telegraph Company, who was the first foreign resident in Singapore to drive in a jiriksha regularly. At the present moment, when we complain of a jiriksha famine because a few thousand less than the usual number of the vehicles are to be found plying on the public thoroughfares, this episode is of more than passing interest. The idea of new jirikshas going a begging at $4 apiece is simply fascinating to-day; yet that is precisely what happened here something less than twenty-five years ago.

A PLEA FOR MERCANTILE JACK.

WHY BRITISH SEAMEN ARE LEAVING THE SERVICE.

"It is too evident, unfortunately, that the British tar, with characteristic independence, not unfrequently lays down the law to the captain, and even sometimes threatens to lay hands on him."

The above is one of the reasons given to the Mayor of Cardiff by a shipowner for the employment nowadays of so many foreigners in the British mercantile marine. The same shipowner also stated to the Mayor of Cardiff that "captains coming into port after a long voyage deplore the conduct of their sailors as compared with foreigners, who are sober, steady, and willing to do what they are told." Implying, of course, that British seamen are intemperate, unsteady, and unwilling.

Now, I'm not a drunkard—I have never been drunk in my life—and I'm fairly steady. In fact, I am a "clerk in holy orders"—in other words, a priest; and yet I have done more than "threaten to lay hands on" a captain of a British merchant ship. I have laid hands on him, and have thrashed him in his own cabin— not unmercifully, but have given him just sufficiently severe a thrashing to teach him the lesson of which, in my opinion, he stood in need.

The same old cantrips, that he is a worthless, unreliable, drunken creature, are being dished up day after day to the hurt of the "common sailor" whilst British shipowners and ship captains are held up to the public view as long-suffering, patient, sober paragons of perfection, whom necessity, born of the deterioration of the English sailor, drives to the unsavoury alternative of employing aliens on British ships!

If it is true (which I doubt) that the majority of Britishers on board our ships are no longer what they used to be, it only means this, that the circumstances and conditions of ship life and work, assisted by our modern methods of engaging crews, are to blame. The older, and perhaps better type of man, has been forced out; and an inferior type of man drawn in.

Take the following as an instance in point:—A captain requires a crew—let us say in a foreign or colonial port. His place as captain depends, largely, upon his economical working of the vessel of which he is in command. Perhaps he is a poor owner. His country commits to him the power to "disrate" any member of his crew—officer as well as able or ordinary seaman—and the unscrupulous captain often so arranges matters before starting on the voyage as to be in a position to exercise this power in the interests of economy; and to the probable addition of all sorts and conditions of undesirable and incapable to the ranks of certified "ordinary" and "able" seamen! A crew is procured through some "runner" who is in the "know." So many A.B.'s; so many ordinaries; so many firemen, &c.; no questions are asked. The reading of the Articles to the men assembled in the Consul's or shipping office is an incomprehensible gabble neither followed nor understood by one of those who is about to "sign on."

The next scene in the comedy takes place out at sea. "You're no able seaman. What the (something which a parson mustn't repeat), what the — d'yer mean by signing as A.B.?" No answer is expected or required. In all probability the man is a barber, or a tailor, or—as was a fellow I had to deal with a few days ago—a commission agent, and the skipper knows it. "Disrated! Get for'ard! Two shillings a month is all you're worth, and it's all you'll get." And so on, perhaps with half a dozen more.

If it has been a well-planned and worked-out scheme a few A.B.'s will have been put on the Articles as firemen; and a few firemen as A.B.'s. The A.B. knows nothing about stoking, and is disrated, and sent on deck to do the work which he can do, and where he is greatly needed, at a few shillings a month! Whilst the fireman, who does not know a "stay" from a "signal halyard," is disrated and sent below at greatly reduced wages. Who would not "lay down the law" to the captain under similar circumstances, and who would not be tempted at times to "lay hands" on those responsible?

I remember an instance in which a man was signed on as cook and steward at £7 10s. a month. They could not sail without a cook and steward being entered on the Articles. But the man knew no more about cooking than a cat! The third day out, when the whole ship's company was on the verge of mutiny, he was disrated and sent into the fo's's as ordinary seaman, at about £1 10s. a month, and an apprentice, who had paid a premium of thirty guineas to be taught seamanship and navigation, and who got no wages, was put into the galley to do the cooking and another of the lads was put into the cabin to act as steward!

The internal economy of our mercantile marine—with some honourable exceptions—is a system of jobbery, and it is this jobbery which is largely responsible for the coming in of the aliens and the undesirable and the casting of Britishers and the older types of seamen.

In addition to all the jobbery which goes on there is also the treatment which is meted out to the men and lads on board ship to take into consideration. Treatment which drives some men and lads to desertion, others to acts of insubordination, and tends to make more cowardly.

animals of the remnant. Take, as an instance of merchant-ship discipline, the case in which a captain disrated an officer, and when this young officer refused to "holly stone" (scrub out) the petty officers' quarters charged him with refusal of duty. This officer was imprisoned for "refusal of duty." On his return to the ship he was again ordered to holly stone, and again refused, and was again charged with refusal of duty. On this occasion the magistrate was satisfied that the "holly stoning" was ordered on account of spite and not of necessity, and discharged the accused telling the captain that his (the captain's) conduct was reprehensible, but warning the young officer to return to the ship, and to do what he was told. He did so, and that skipper "broke" him!

Thirty-six years ago I was a little lad standing upon the poop of a British ship out on the Indian Ocean. I witnessed then an act of brutality which set my young blood boiling, and had I been a man, would have made a "matinee" of me, for I should most certainly have thrashed the bully—who was the chief officer of the ship—or have been thrashed by him. Whichever way it turned out, I should have been guilty of striking a superior officer. Fortunately for me, I did not follow the career of a British seaman. Had I done so, ten chances to one I should to-day have been found in the ranks of those who are cast aside as "not wanted," and who are classed amongst drunkards and matineers—for man generally becomes what his conditions and surroundings make him. And I would appeal to the British public to postpone passing judgment upon our British merchant seamen until such time as more is known of the actual conditions under which they have to live their lives and work their work.

That British seamen are still available is a fact. That a large percentage of them are capable, disciplined, and reliable men is a fact also, and that an inferior leaven has found its way into their midst—an ever-growing leaven, and an ever-deepening inferiority—is to be attributed, not so much to the sailors themselves, as to the jobbery of some of those who employ them, and of the conduct of some of those who rule over them.

SHARPERS ON TROOPSHIPS.

A returned soldier caused some surprise in a London police court the other week by stating that he won £300 in gambling on South African troopships. So far no adequate publicity has been given to the fact that during the war transport ships and from the Cape were practically converted into gambling dens. No organised amusement was provided for the soldiers, who in order to pass time indulged in wild games of chance. The result was that throughout the voyage the troop-decks provided many exciting scenes.

On board the majority of the transports there was a clique of the shady persons whose sole object was to acquire the hard-earned pay of men who had fought and endured hardship. Their procedure was to make frequent trips to the Cape, join an irregular corps, serve a few months, and return home by means of an indulgence passage. By this means they were afforded opportunity to make from £100 to £200 on route. Some of them were broken down bookmakers, and they readily admitted that "working the war" was more remunerative. There was no concealment of identity, for on nearing Southampton they discarded khaki and blossomed forth in big-checked suits.

But for these pests many of the genuine ex-soldiers now starving and homeless would have been in a position of comparative affluence. It was a common occurrence to see cards covered with gold to the extent of £100. The officers of one regiment, determined to stop gambling, paid their men in five-pound notes. Shortly afterwards five-pound notes were exchanged wholesale for £3 in ready cash. Two days later nearly the whole of this extraordinary pay issue had drifted into the pockets of the enterprising sharpers, who were as much in their element on one of H.M. transports as they would have been on a racecourse.

RAYNIER'S PERIL,

A ROMANCE OF THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.

BY BERTRAM MITFORD

(Author of "The Ruby Steed," "Sign of the Spider," "The Word of the Sorceress," &amp;c.)

CHAPTER VII.

A SURPRISE.

Herbert Raynier ran lightly up the steps of his verandah, feeling intensely satisfied with himself and things in general.

Though summer, the air was delightfully balmy, and the glow of the sunset redounding the leads of the mountains surrounding the basin in which lay Mazara, was soothing and grateful to the eye. The bungalow was roomy and commodious, and stood in the midst of a pleasant garden, where closing flowers distilled fragrant scents upon the evening-air. This sent his mind back in thankful contrast to hot, steaming, languid Baghnagar, its brassy skies and feverish exhalations, where even at this late hour the very crows lining the roof would be open-billed and gasping. And thus contrasting the new with the old order of things he decided for the fiftieth time that the luckiest moment of his life was when he stepped out of the official letter which met him on landing at Bombay—apparently his Political Agent at Mazara. Hardly less in contrast between the climate of his new station and the last, were the people with whom he now had to deal. There was nothing whatever in common between the meek subservient natives he had hitherto ruled, and the stalwart independence of these wild mountain tribes, whose turbulent and predatory instincts needed nice handling to keep in efficient control. But all this appeared to him vividly, and he threw himself into his new duties with an eager zest which caused those who had known his predecessor to smile. He recognised that here at least was a chance; here he might find scope for his latent ability which had been stagnated in his old Department had been in danger of stifling altogether. In fact he was inclined to regret the abnormally tranquil state of things, when Jelson, his predecessor, had congratulated him upon the fact that Muslim Khan, the chief of the powerful, and often turbulent, Gularai tribe, had become so amenable since the Government had created him a Nawab that the meanest bhungia might almost walk through the Gularai country alone and with his pockets bulging with rupees, in perfect safety.

Herbert Raynier flung himself into a comfortable chair on the verandah, and lighted a cigarette. He had half an hour to spare before it should be time to dress and go out to dinner, and how should such be better spent than in a restful smoke: yet while enjoying this his thoughts were active enough. His prospects, rosy as the afterglow which dwelt upon the surrounding peaks, kept him busy for a time, and over all was a sense of great relief. If he had saved the life of an unknown Oriental, the hands of a particularly brutal mob, assuredly he had been repaid to the full, but for that circumstance matters would never have come to a head with Cynthia. He would still be only a head and fast by a chain of which he had broken the full-weight since he had broken it. For he had broken it—finally, irrevocably, unmistakably—he told himself, since that last scene in the Vicarage garden he and Cynthia had exchanged no word. The remainder of that day had not been of a pleasant nature, and he had left by an early train on the following morning, to return three days later to India. No letter, either of farewell, or reproach, or reconciliation—he had had feared—reached him at the last, and it was with feelings of genuine relief that he watched the shores of the mother country fade into the invisible.

Tarleton, the Civil Surgeon, at whose bungalow Raynier was dining, was somewhat of a trying social unit, in that he was never even by chance known to agree with any remark or proposition, whether trivial or trivial, put forward by anybody, or if there was no conceivable room for gaining such why then he would append some brisk aggressive comment in rider fashion. As thus:

"How do, Raynier. How did you come over? Didn't walk, did you?"

"No. Biked."

"No! Bicycle's not much use up here, I can tell you."

Raynier remarked that he found the machine useful for getting about the station, and that the roads in and immediately around the same were rather good.

"Well, you didn't expect to find them all rocks and stones did you?" came the prompt rejoinder.

Tarleton was white-haired and red-faced, which caused him to look older than his actual years. Another of his peculiarities was that he was continually altering his facial appearance. Now he would grow a beard; then suddenly without a word to anybody, would trim it down to what they call in Transylvania a "chin whisker" or shave it altogether. Or, one day he would appear with a long, carefully waxed moustache and the next, with that appendage clipped to the consistency of a toothbrush. And so on.

Just at this stage, however, Raynier recognising that he was on the high road to cordially detesting the man, had laid himself out to be extra long suffering.

"Wonder if those women ever mean to come up?" went on Tarleton, with a fidgety glance at the clock, for the two were alone in the drawing-room just before dinner.

"Oh, one has to give the ornamental sex a little 'law,'" said the other, good-humouredly.

"Well, you can't expect them to put on this kind of speech-making was at all in your line," said the 'Surprise,' demurely.

She was a tallish girl, rather slight, with refined and regular features, which nineteen out of twenty pronounced 'cold.' She had a great deal of dark brown hair, and very uncommon eyes; in fact they were unequivocally and unmistakably green. Yet framed in their dark, abundant lashes, they might be capable of throwing as complete an attraction, a fascination, as the most regular blue or hazel ones. She was not popular with men. Not enough 'go' in her, they declared. Seemed more cat out for a bluesinger.

But had Raynier had been fellow-passengers out, he had had little to say to each other on board. He had dined with her three or four times, which was rather remarkable in view of that being a form of exercise which he favoured but little. Both had this in common, that they held aloof from the usual 'boardship' amusements yet they had not come together at all. It was only when they landed at Bombay and the friends she had expected to meet her had not arrived, that Raynier, noting the look of intense consternation, as she realised how she was stranded, a total stranger in a very strange land, had come to the rescue—had even foregone his train and remained over until the next day to be of service to her. This he had done out of sheer kindness—the other passengers having gone their respective ways without giving her a thought—and having handed her over to her friends who had been unavoidably delayed, had bidden her good-bye and had gone his own—no, too, scarcely giving her another thought.

"Hilda says you were so kind to her at Bombay, Mr. Raynier," went on his hostess.

"Oh—that's nothing," Mrs. Tarleton. Glad to have the best of any service of course," he replied, in that hurried, half confused way that comes of a man of his disposition under the circumstances.

"But it isn't nothing," struck in the girl decidedly. "Do you know, Mrs. Tarleton, Mr. Raynier even waited till the next day to look after me. And it's odd because we hardly knew each other on the ship."

"Oh well," mumbled Raynier feebly, "you can't see anybody stranded like that, a lady, especially in a totally strange place without doing something to straighten things out for them."

Hilda Clive smiled.

"None of the others seemed to be of that opinion, at any rate," she said.

Snapped Tarleton. "Well, you can't expect a lot of people just landed from a voyage to think about anything but themselves and their own belongings."

For once Raynier felt frankly grateful to the contentious one—if only that it was said just for Tarleton to lay down a statement on any given subject to enna his ordinary hearers to drop that subject like a hot bar. Wherefore these promptly turned to another.

Sust Singh and Kan Singh, chupressis, were aroused from the drowsy enjoyment of the r bubble-bubbles by a very unwelcome intruder in the Political Agent's compound late at night, and were well nigh speechless at the suppositions emanating from the fat trader they had left on the road! See the Huzzar! At that time of night! It was the Police Station the fool wanted. Something of the highest importance? Let him come in the morning. It would not hurt until then. Besides, the Huzzar was out dining.

In a drowsy state of fear and perplexity Chand Lal, thus roused, got out into the road again, and with a scared look over each shoulder, looked the way as quickly as he could from the gate. But this was not quick, for even in the darkness it might have been seen that he walked with a painful limp. In the darkness too, something else might have been seen—two figures stealing along in the deeper shade of the tent, risk ledge. He whom they shadowed saw them not—at first—then having chosen their spot, they quickened their pace, and darting forward flung themselves upon him.

The yell, which the assailed man opened his mouth to utter, died in his throat as the white light of a long knife-blade streaked before his eyes.

"Silence or thou art dead," snarled a harsh voice. "So, dog, thou wouldst betray us?"

In the dirty white turbans and hairy hooded faces, Chand Lal knew only too well who were these. Already they had begun to drag him swiftly along. Then in his frenzy of terror at the recollection of the fate he had escaped from and which certainly awaited him now, even the fear of instant death did not avail. A loud quavering shriek for aid rang from his lip.

But it died in a choking gasp. The white knife blade disappeared to emerge again red—and this not once only. A corpse lay wallowing in the road and two loosely clad figures vanished into the darkness, even as they had come out of it.

CHARLES FORDE'S

Bile Beans

for Bilioussness.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST SPECIFIC.

This discovery is revolutionising all the present methods of treatment for digestive ailments. The old theory of purgation, starving, purging, etc., is to be done away with. This great vegetable substance is compounded with other ingredients to facilitate the working and possesses the peculiar properties of acting on the bowels without purging or otherwise weakening the patient. This is because the substance that relaxes the bowels has about the same action as the most chronic cases of Liver and Stomach Troubles of them will probably successfully cure their origin to defective bile flow, assimilation, and digestion. These Beans are placed on the market in such a form that anyone can take them without medical supervision, and as the price is so very low, there are few homes that cannot afford to always have a box on the shelf for emergency.

Charles Forde's Bile Beans for Bilioussness are a Certain Cure for Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Piles, Liver Trouble, Bad Breath, Rheumatism, Colds, Liver Chills, Indigestion, Flatulence, Diarrhoea, Bloating in the Head, Dizziness, Anemia, and all Febrile Affections. Of Chemists, or post free from Messrs. WATKINS, LD., HONGKONG, or receipt of price 75 cents per box.

Clarke's Blood Mixture

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE." THE WORLD-FAMED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RESTORER.

IS WARRANTED TO CLEAR THE BLOOD from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, Blackheads, Pimples, and Sores of all kinds, it is a never-failing and permanent Cure.

Cures Old Sores. Cures Sores on the Neck. Cures Sore Legs. Cures Blackheads or Pimples on the Face. Cures Scoury. Cures Itch and Skin Diseases. Cures Glandular Swellings.

Clears the Blood from all impure Matter from whatever cause arising. It is a real specific for Gout and Rheumatic pains. It removes the cause from the Blood and Bones. As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste, and warranted free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, the Proprietors solicit sufferers to give it a trial to test its value.

Mr. Stephen Morgan writes: "I have suffered since 1866 with a various rheumatic leg, and have been under five doctors. I also attended two hospitals, but at one they suggested that I should have my leg off, and at the other they said I should have the bone cut out. You may guess my feelings, therefore, to find myself now cured by taking 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' and applying 'Clarke's Marcelline Salve,' especially as I have a family of eight children. My leg measures now as it did when I was a boy, and part of my work I have done on my knees. The matter coming from my leg was as black as soot, but it has now completely healed up, and I am out of agony, a thing not known to me for the past eight years. I must say I think my cure a marvellous one. I am most grateful to 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' for its effect, and find the proper remedy, then ten large ones, also a few pills of the salve, and my leg is off. I have spent, I think, in other remedies, but they have been no good to me. I shall be pleased to answer any questions, and afflicted brothers and sisters can see my leg for themselves. You can make any use of this letter for the public good."

31, Milkmaid Lane, St. John's Road, Upper Holloway, London, N., May 25, 1899.
